ABSTRACT

The problems that occur in the Department of Social Sciences Education at the Islamic State University of Malang are that a) a lot still has no preparation in the form of soft skills in dealing with the world of work; b) alumni require soft skills in the world of work; c) usually requires knowledge of the performance system both in BUMN, BUMS and other institutions. The method for solving these problems is to provide training in preparation for entering the workforce with discussion, demonstration and practice techniques regarding soft skills needed in the world of work. Preparatory training for entering the workforce is one way to equip and instill soft skills combined with actual facts with college alumni. Embedding soft skills in preparation for entering the workforce will help higher education alumni become competent individuals in their careers.
INTRODUCTION

1.1.1. Background

Higher education is an educational institution where students are required to become members of the community who have academic and professional abilities that can apply, develop and create knowledge that has been obtained in the lecture bench. Law of the Republic of Indonesia number 12 of 2012 concerning Higher Education Article 1 paragraph 15 states that students are students at the Higher Education level. The undergraduate program prepares students to be intellectuals and cultured scientists. The bachelor program also prepares students to be able to enter and create jobs, and be able to develop themselves professionally.

The tertiary institution carries out the three tridharma functions of the tertiary institution including education, research, and community service, as well as managing science and technology. Some phenomena show that many people assume that by entering college, a student is expected to be able to prepare himself to meet his future life for work readiness. However, in reality, the quality of tertiary education graduates is not always acceptable and able to work as expected by the world of work (Asmawi, 2005). This is also consistent with the results of Talib and Aun’s research (2009) which says that students with high academic ability but low career and vocational information knowledge means that they cannot determine their career.

The quantity of undergraduate graduates at the University of Mataram State University from various faculties has increased from year to year. The quantity of graduates has not been accumulated with other tertiary institutions in the West Nusa Tenggara region. This means that the number of the workforce is increasing. The increase in the number of the workforce will cause intense competition among college graduates.

Phenomenon in the world of work is still the large number of unemployed workforce that is marked by additional unemployment because the increase in the workforce is greater than the availability of employment. This shows that job vacancies have not been able to accommodate all job seekers. Therefore the government also targets job creation to reduce the number of unemployment rates. In addition there needs to be reforms in the education system that are capable of producing competent and ready-to-work human resources.

Entering the world of work signifies the start of new roles and responsibilities for students. When a student first enters the workforce, some feel confused because they are in certain conditions that they have never felt before. Even some of them have to face various problems in the world of work that they had never predicted before.

Students who have graduated should prepare themselves in the face of the world of work, one of which is by attending pre-employment training. According to Hasibuan (2006) training is intended to improve the mastery of various skills and techniques for carrying out specific, detailed and routine work. Sudarmanto (2009) also explained that the training major is that the knowledge, skills, and the peril I was able to be applied in everyday activities in the workplace. Salinding (2011) asserts that there is a positive influence between the training variables on employee work productivity. This means that pre training enters the workforce is an individual way to prepare themselves from various aspects so that it is more productive.

Pool and Sewell (2007) state that job readiness is to have expertise, knowledge, understanding and personality that makes a person able to choose and feel comfortable with their work so that they become satisfied and ultimately achieve success. Santrock (2008) states the importance of having work readiness and work for students to change careers. Karir defined Hartono (2010) as a term used to designate how far a person has progressed in carrying out professional or occupational activities. Career closely related it to the lives of individuals, students who have a good job readiness to change careers for more advanced students in the activities of the profession.

Preparations are made with the aim of gaining deeper knowledge about careers and the world of work, so as to help students improve their career planning knowledge going forward. Preparatory activities entering the workforce are one way of preparing to enter the workforce, enhancing individual career planning, and choosing work.

Based on this, the team dedication necessary to organize training preparation for entering the workforce with the theme “Pelatihan Preparation Entering the World of Work To Improve Soft Skills Alumni of Economic IPS Universitas Islamic Mataram” has several objectives, namely:
